

Doctoral Consortium

The Networked Learning Conference 2018 doctoral consortium provides an opportunity for PhD students to discuss and explore their research ideas, to practice presentation at an international conference and to get feedback from active and senior researchers in networked learning (NL).

The Doctoral Consortium will take place on Monday 14th May, 2018 from 09.00 – 12.00. An initial abstract needs to be submitted for the session.

Participation

Students who are currently enrolled in any stage of doctoral studies with a focus on NL research can apply. The doctoral consortium will be led by Thomas Ryberg and Petar Jandrić, and other key researchers attending the sessions will be announced in due course.

Requirements

PhD students are required to submit an extended abstract (with short literature review, methodology, results or expected results), up to 2 pages in length including references. You are also asked to submit a short Curriculum Vita (CV) including a statement about your expected benefits of participation for both yourself and the other consortium participants (i.e. what you will contribute as well as gain) and how you see the relationship between your PhD project and Networked Learning, up to a maximum length of half a page (together with your photo-image if you wish). Abstracts will be reviewed, and revisions may be requested prior to acceptance. Students who have submitted full papers to the conference may also submit a different extended abstract for the doctoral consortium, but if the doctoral consortium is overbooked, then preference will be given to those not submitting to the conference.

A list of PhD students registered and with accepted submitted extended abstracts and CV by 1st May 2018 will be listed on the website.

Registration and submission

For PhD students, the registration fee for the conference includes access to the doctoral consortium.

You should email your extended abstract and short CV as separate documents to Petar Jandrić (pjandric@tvz.hr). Your extended abstract and short CV should be in Microsoft Word format, using 12pt font Times New Roman.
